

Senior Product Manager Montreal

Our client develops products and services to protect Internet users worldwide. A new position has been created for a Senior Product Manager (based in Montreal) that will be responsible for developing and articulating the vision of those products and services. In this position you'll be expected to effectively serve as both a business leader and entrepreneur for all associated products. In addition, you will work on a range of diverse problems, requiring the merging of creative visions with technology to provide products and services designed to meet the computer security needs of consumers.

Key Responsibilities

Driving the product definition process and product roadmap

Defining the next generation of Freedom products and services with the collaboration of senior management

Working closely with the Engineering, Operations, Marketing and Sales teams to ensure timely product delivery and release

Supporting the Sales and Marketing teams in the creation of marketing collaterals and sales support materials

Requirements:

A technical degree coupled with 5-7 years work experience in software product management and technology-related marketing

Technical knowledge should include IP networking, IP-based applications such as HTTP, operating systems, applications infrastructure and GUI design

Excellent written and verbal communication skills Strong interpersonal and project management skills The ability to manage multiple priorities in a fast paced environment